

ABSTRACT

A wireless communication system has spread spectrum and narrow band users. A selected base station produces a spread spectrum signal for transmission in a selected sector of the base station. The produced spread spectrum signal notch filters at frequencies. These frequencies are used by narrow band users located in the selected sector and sectors of base stations other than the selected base station adjacent to the selected sector. The notch filtered signal is transmitted in the selected sector.